Police Believe Mutilated Body in Convicted Walking Delegate in Hoboken Ferry Slip Is that of a Man Possibly Slain on the Jersey Shore.

IDENTIFICATIONS MADE, BUT ALL ARE WRONG.

Top of Head Was Cut Off, and the Theory Is Advanced that This May Have Been Done to Hide a Bullet Wound.

The mystery surrounding the muti-North River near the Hoboken ferry slip grows deeper with each passing hour. grows deeper with each passing hour.
The belief that the man was murdered is growing more firmly fixed in the rolling and detectives ens of the police and detectives en-upon the case, Volk's Morgue, Hoboken, this ing it was said by A. J. Volk that dentification of the body as that of me J. Smith, of No. 989 East One Hundred and Fifty-sixth street, who mysteriously disappeared on Wednesday after collecting $30,900, had proven false. The identification of the body by Mrs. Michael Mealy, of Philadelphia, as that of her husband, has also been disproven.

Not Jerome J. Smith. George H. Thompson, manager of the Bronx office of the Conron Brothers' packing house, first thought from the descriptions of the body at the Hobo-ken Morgue that it was that of Smith. But Smith was forty-two years old, was 5 feet 10 inches in height, weighed 175! pounds, was bald on the top of his head and had a smooth face. In appearance he greatly resembled a priest or clergyman. The dead man must have been at least 6 feet in height and had a gray

The identification of the body by Mrs. Mealy as that of her husband was positively denied this morning by Thomas Mellss, of No. 807 Garden street, Ho-

A third identification of the body was West One Hundred and Thirty-first which is fair. That is, it is almost fair, treef. Bingston on viewing the body iced it that of Nils Knutson, who poarded with bim until Sept. 14.

Bingston knew of no marks on Knut-con's body by which it could positively be identified, but he said the body at Volk's morgue closely resembles that of Knutson. The police, after questioning Bingston, were inclined to cast doubt upon his identification.

f Cause of Death Unknown.

It is also shought that, while several of the mutilations may have been caused by the propeller of a large steamer, the legs were not cut off in this manner.

The legs were severed in each case by suits extending from above the hip bones inward and downward. One stroke of a propeller could not have severed both legs, and there is not one chance in a hundred that two such cuts so closely resembling each other could have been made by accident.

Doubt Swimming Theory.

The theory that the man had been swimming, which accounts for the absence of clothes, is doubted. The appearance of the body indicates a man of some refinement. The finger nails were well kept and the hands were in good condition, although at one time the man had evidently done hard work. Judging from these facts, the man could not have been a sailor, and so hardly would have gone swimming near the steamship piers as sailors on the Atlantic liners sometimes do after dark. The body indicated that the man was in comfortable or even opulent circumstances. Doubt Swimming Theory.

in comfortable or even optient circumstances.

The belief that the body is the main feature of another Guldensuppe mystery is gaining ground with each passing day.
